Cease-fire countdown intensifies fighting

TYRE, Lebanon (CNN) — Israel and Hezbollah looked to inflict maximum damage as the clock ticked toward a scheduled cease-fire Monday morning, each side pounding targets with heavy missile barrages. Despite widespread hope that the cease-fire will bring a halt to the month long conflict, it was unclear what effect it will have.

Israel reports mortars fired inside Lebanon (CNN) —

About 4 mortar rounds were fired inside southern Lebanon late Monday, hours after a cease-fire between Israel and Lebanon's Hezbollah guerrillas, the Israeli military reported early Tuesday. The rockets landed inside Lebanese territory, and Israeli forces will not respond to their firing, a military spokesman told CNN's Chris Lawrence. Hezbollah launched scores of rockets a day into northern Israel during a 34-day conflict, killing at least 41 Israeli civilians. (Posted 11:50 p.m.)

Training will involve instruction in and around training area number two. Monday they practiced running their engines at high rotations per minute (RPMs) to enhance their knowledge of managing their vehicles in FHL's hot and hilly terrain. Tuesday they will train with trailers, and Wednesday will be night training to test the skills they learn during the day under the cover and challenges of darkness.
